LONDON, October 22.—London is still threatened with serious disorder. The police now have to patrol Trafalgar square in large numbers constantly to prevent gathering. They are also on guard at all places of open air meetings. Even the Salvation Army people have been obliged to stop parading. The beginning of cold weather has developed the fact of the presence of unusual misery and desperation in London. Thus far the mob has been very easily controlled, but it is understood that to-morrow renewed efforts will be made to get up demonstrations in spite of the police. Sir Charles Warren knows that his official head is at stake if he should permit a repetition of the tremendous scenes of disorder which secured the downfall of his predecessor. He has given very strict orders to his men, but it will take constant vigilance to keep the great army of desperate and hungry men down. Special care will be taken to-morrow, for the Prince of Wales came to London to-day for a brief visit.

A SEA MYSTERY.

Nelson's Flagship—Mme. Gerster's American Tour—Mr. Weldon's Plain Speech.

Special Cablegram to the Post-Dispatch.
LONDON, October 22.—Off Harwick on Wednesday afternoon a bottle corked with wine was found floating in the sea. It contained the following message: "The crew of the Bird of Freedom all went down on Sunday Hook; Almond, captain. The Lord be with us."

NELSON'S FLAGSHIP.

It was discovered yesterday that Nelson's flagship Victory, long unused in Portsmouth Harbor, had sprung a leak and that there were many feet of water in the hold. Two hundred sailors and marines were now placed on board with the pumping appliances, and by their efforts and the aid of a tug the water was reduced so as to enable a diver to descend and stop up the hole which was found in the hold.

To-day is the anniversary of the battle of Trafalgar. The tug which stood by the Victory all night left her this morning, and the ship is reported to be making less water than has been the case at any time during the last twelve months. The Admiralty are considering a proposal to have the vessel docked.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

Etika Gerster sails from Havre by the Burgoyne on November 5, to fulfill an engagement with Abbey and Grau for a concert and opera season in America. There is a misunderstanding in the American papers about the company supporting her. Manager Grau telegraphs from Paris the completion of the company as follows: Nettie Carpenter, violinist; Mlle. Sacconi, harpist; Helene Hattreiter, contralto; Riksten, tenor; D'Ann, baritone; Carbone, basso; Ferrari, conductor.

Baron Hermance, the child pianist, sails for America by the North German Lloyd steamer Aller on November 17, accompanied by his father, mother and German manager.

WELDON'S PLAIN SPEECH.

At the annual meeting of the Church of Ireland and Protestant Temperance Society in Dublin, last night, Rev. Lewis B. Weldon, M. A., spoke on temperance and society. After alluding to the habit of using strong drink on every conceivable social occasion, he said, with all deference to Her Majesty, the Queen, he wished she would find out a more salutary and honorable memory of the late Prince Consort than that of sending her sons and sons-in-law to the top of the Highland mountains in order to drink raw whisky. The annual Highland gathering used to be held at Balmoral. It was his lot to be present at the festival this year, which was held in the very presence of Her Majesty, and a more disgusting scene of revolting drunkenness he never saw in his life. Donnybrook in its worst traditions could not equal the disgusting scene he there saw with his own eyes. The Metropolitan Police are completely worn out by the extra duties occasioned by the vacancies of the unemployed. Orders have been given the Commanders of Barracks to hold the troops in readiness for any emergency. Several large mass-meetings are announced for to-morrow, and orders have been given the soldiers not to leave the Barracks that day, trouble being apprehended.

LADY BRASSEY.

The Interesting Career of a Remarkable English Woman.

Special Cablegram to the Post-Dispatch.
LONDON, October 22.—A gossip society writer, speaking of the late Lady Brassey, says: "She will be especially mourned in Hastings and the surrounding district, where she and Lord Brassey have for twenty years taken a keen interest in the welfare of all classes and various public institutions connected with the locality. Her ladyship was a fearless housewife and when a resident at Normanton, often attended the meetings of the East Sussex fox-hunt with her daughters. The last time that her ladyship was out with the hounds was in November last, when the meet was at Pebsham. Goringe entertained a large company to breakfast in honor of his daughter's coming of age. Lady Brassey returned there in a genial spirit on behalf of the ladies. A few days afterward she started for India."

tragic. Maddened by fever, she jumped overboard from the yacht, and her husband, who followed her, was with difficulty rescued from sharing the fate of his loyal and affectionate wife."

A REMARKABLE WOMAN.

Lady Brassey is remembered by those who have known her well as a restless, forceful woman of the most indomitable will, and of American-like energy. From the date of her marriage her ambition centered itself in the career which she was determined her husband should work out, and through her never-ceasing devotion to him and his children, and the example of vigilance which she set, she made him what he afterward proved to be, a member of the House of Lords. Mr. Brassey was like his father, old Tom Brassey, a civil engineer, and devoted himself to that profession and to the business of contracting to build bridges and other erections requiring acute engineering proficiency, until some time after his marriage. His wife soon changed this about as not suiting the ends she had in view, and imbued him thoroughly with her own enthusiasm. Under her tuition he became a spirited yachtsman, the author of some more or less clever books of the times, and an out-and-out politician. In 1855, five years after marriage, he came out as a Liberal Gladstonian. During the last two last administrations he held the post of Chief Lord of the Admiralty, and was in the end, as above said, raised to the House of Lords fourteen months ago. Despite the inordinate love of travel against which it is said her husband at times slightly rebelled, Lady Brassey was openly acknowledged by her husband, and the world in general, as being not only the maker of his success, but a most faithful wife and devoted mother as well.

HER POLITICAL SCHEMES.

And her social ambitions never weighed so heavily upon her, but her presence in London was at once made manifest by her daily drives with her children in the parks. They were always seen together and the mutual affection was noted as being truly remarkable in the family of so pronounced a strong-minded woman. Besides being politically ambitious, if so the phrase may be used, Lady Brassey was ever Mrs. Brassey, famous socially as a thorough connoisseur. At her house, No. 24 Park Lane, London, one was sure to find everybody that in the phrase of the world, was anybody. Her house never degenerated into the vulgar feeling of a "camp," but the wide world was there, and the social life of London was the same social life of London that we are used to seeing them held in Washington, but they had a very faithful friend in Lady Brassey. She made a very particular point at one time of advancing the interests of the Chinese Embassy, making them quite the social lions of the season. It was indeed at her house at one of the really fine concerts for which she was noted, that Joanna Miller emptied his famous pockets of those memorable leaves, making a pathway of them down the drawing room for Mrs. Langtry, then in the very glory of her success, to walk upon. "May this be your path through life," he said.

Besides all this and besides being an authoress made liberally famous by her two first books, "The Flight of the Meteor" and "Voyage in the Etoile," and her last and most successful "Voyage of the Sunbeam," Lady Brassey had more truly enviable reputation as a thoroughly good and capable woman, first, while she was but the daughter of John Althorn, and afterwards as the mother, she was known as a creature of the honest, kind heartedness and the deepest charity. For many years she was the patroness of the Ambulance Association, and for the zeal which she displayed in that connection was made "Dame Chevalier" of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem.

CAPT. ODANN.

The Irishman Arrested in France on the Charge of Being a German Spy.

Special Cablegram to the Post-Dispatch.
PARIS, October 22.—Capt. Sidney Odann, an Irishman, supposed to be a German spy, was arrested a few days ago at Belleme Station for an attempt to enter French territory in disguise as an expatriate. He was also charged against him in January last. A. M. Wolitz, who accompanied him, was also arrested, and both are now awaiting trial. The accusation against Odann is that after having been expelled from the country, he picked up an acquaintance with a private of the 2nd Chasseurs named Pecherie, and had made him an offer for his new Lee-Enfield repeating rifle. Upon searching Odann's luggage nothing compromising was found. A ticket to Turin and 2,000 francs were discovered in his pocket book. The police assert that the Turin ticket is conclusive evidence that Odann intended to go to Nice, where Ferron is organizing an entrenched camp, instead of his first destination. Odann insists that he is a French agent and wishes to study both the German and French military systems with a view to the coming struggle in Ireland against England. A few visiting cards have been found in his pocket which bear the names of the Emperor, the King, the Emperor William, and in charge of the military education of the children of his Majesty. Odann is confident of being released.

A DETECTIVE FOLLOWING HIM.

Flight of a Baronet Accused of a Serious Crime.

Special Cablegram to the Post-Dispatch.
LONDON, October 22.—A warrant was granted under the provisions of the criminal law amendment act for the arrest of a baronet who has been charged with the murder of a woman at the dock at the police court, hurriedly left the country a week since. An extradition warrant was privately applied for and obtained. This has been entrusted to a Scotland Yard officer of large experience, who, it is said, has proceeded to the Continent in the hope of being able to execute it. The circumstances of the alleged outrage are of an extraordinary nature. The young lady is the daughter of a professional man and it is said that for some considerable time before the discovery was made, she clandestinely met the Baronet in the neighborhood of Brompton; that he used to drive her about in his brougham, and that finally he took her to his house in Primrose, where her ruin was effected. Great efforts have been made to hush up the matter, but warrants once granted can not be withdrawn without the consent of the court, and this is not at all likely to be obtained.

VICTOR HUGO'S HOME.

The Poet's Children Will Soon Move Into Another Home.

Special Cablegram to the Post-Dispatch.
PARIS, October 22.—The children of Victor Hugo will be obliged to give up their father's house. He lived in a leased house owned by the Princess De Lueignan. She would never sell, because its tenant gave the property such value. Hugo, as they were time before his death, began to plan for building a new house. This plan the children have not been able to carry out. They cannot rent the lease of the present house without paying three times the present rent, $600. This they consider too much of a good thing, and so have bought another house in the same avenue, where they propose to reproduce as faithfully as possible the salon and chamber between which the poet divided his closing years, and to transfer thither all objects associated with him. It is said that Victor Hugo's landlady is engaged in negotiations for the sale of her house to some American speculator. As yet the rooms in which Victor Hugo lived have been undisturbed, just as they were on the day of his death. Of course, however, the family when they move in a couple of months will leave nothing but the bare walls. Any one buying the house as a show place will, therefore, have to provide an imitation of all the fittings and furniture. Under all circumstances it may be doubted whether the speculation would be a good one. There was an idea of opening a subscription to purchase the house, but as the public have lately been appealed to for the erection of a great statue to put in the Place Victor Hugo, the project has been abandoned. I understand that Victor Hugo's last will left a manuscript to occupy his literary executors for many years. Altogether, great and small, they are stated to have numbered no less than three hundred thousand. The "Fin de Satan" and "Clothes" were issued as the last of his works, but as the public have lately been appealed to for the erection of a great statue to put in the Place Victor Hugo, the project has been abandoned. A YOUNG DOCTOR'S DISGRACE.

Steals to Save a Starving Mother, and Is Saved by a Friend.

CHICAGO, October 22.—E. C. Abbott, a young physician, accused of larceny as bailee in borrowing books from his fellow doctors (and giving them, found a friend to-day. His case is called before Justice White, and no more than ten physicians were on hand to prosecute. Before the case was called a well-known business man ne in and called the complainants to one place. He told them how Abbott's mother had put her entire means in educating her son as a physician, and how the boy had studied and graduated with high honors at the Rush Medical College in Chicago.

Young Abbott, he said, had then hung his sign, but had been unfortunate, and patients didn't come. Meantime the few dollars left to his widowed mother were rapidly melting away to furnish the means of subsistence, and, though the two were economical that they lived on reduced rations, the mother's threatened the face. It was to furnish his mother with that Abbott took and sold the books, and a young doctor's friend asked for mercy. Some of the books were recovered, but some the physicians were dissatisfied. Then the Samaritan pulled out $35 and proposed to divide the sum pro rata among the losers of books. This was agreed to and each doctor took his share. They then proceeded for Abbott with Justice was imposed. The business man turned Abbott and, putting a $50-bill in the young man's hand, said: "Now, my boy, go away from town and start life anew." Abbott sat out with bowed head, and was soon followed by the doctors.

The incidental appeal to the Federal Constitution, which it is hoped may be the jurisdiction for a writ of error, was only intended as a rhetorical turn to a sentence.

The Democratic Convention which will next July to nominate a Governor will be composed of delegates from each of the 114 counties selected on a basis of one to each 500 Democratic voters or fraction thereof as shown by the returns at the last election for President.

C. C. RAINWATER said of the vote: "It is a very fair indication of the feeling throughout the State. The country parties that exist any length of time cannot but grow weary and conform to the sentiment of the people who patronize them. Political leaning has a great deal to do with the vote."

E. O. STANARD, and ordered four glasses of the best whiskey in the house; one for the President; another for Mayor Francis; another for Dan Lamont, another for William W. Wadsworth, and a fifth for a rival Col. Caruth called to the Mayor and said: "Francis, here's some good whiskey, go and ask the President to come and take a drink."

...deliberation of two days or practically only one day could be."

"Was not the Convention a little general in its endorsement?"

"Oh, yes, most conventions are."

"When will you appoint the committee to go to Washington?"

"Some time next week, or for the next three weeks. Some of the delegates are going to be in the city for a day or two for keeping him in sufficient time to see him."

Col. Caruth went on to the "times and tongue" the President's arm gave him one of those meaning looks which are so well understood by good Democrats.

"I have heard of your members and remarked quietly: 'Mr. Cleveland there's a little good whisky inside if you would

"To whom will the strength of the lesser candidates go, do you think?"

"I see no reason why I should not get my share of it. The strength of Clardy and Hand will go for Francis, I think. Southeast Missouri has always been very close together, St. Louis voted almost as a unit for Clardy."

Alex M. Dockery—Sullivan, Charlton, Menck, Livingstone, Getty, Dekalb, Grundy, Ray, Greene, Shelby, Worth, Daviss, Mercer, and myself have all voted for Clardy."

"The strength of the delegations will not send me the names of their representatives until they return home. I will appoint the committee, probably, within a month."

MICHAEL McENNIS explained with great circumstance the beauties of the convention. "The delegates taken to the convention," said Mr. McKenna, "are the best of the party."

"There are four glasses here," said a "who are they for?"

"Why, there is one for you, one for me, one for the party, and one for the cause."

James H. Burton, Platt, Holt, Cape Girardeau, St. Clair, Jasper, Newton, Morgan, Lincoln, Lewis, Fike, Buchanan, Cuss—12. You have shown some strength, was pronounced. "I have been looking at this mildly," "shows that there is nothing fractions at the St. Louis delegation." In this the St. Louis delegation was not in the majority, they agree perfectly with Mr. McKinnis, in fact they say that if the St. Louis delegation had been a little more "fractious" the convention would have pronounced everything which was brought before it.

Nick Bell Condemns That St. Louis Will

WASHINGTON, D. C., Tuesday, Dec. 22.—Nicholas M. ...and would identify them in their respective localities, and do not rank high in the catalogue of the National Democratic Committee. There are more country papers that mean nothing than there are city papers of that class. They will arouse a feeling on the subject throughout the country, and will be a very effective communication with the members of the National Democratic Committee with reference to the selection of a place for holding the next Democratic National Convention, but he could not say whether it would be a success or not. "They did, sir, and in two or three days I was told man, Think of it, sir! I can see the head of the man, and I can see the man's heartbeats! Why, sir, your stamp begins to fight back who of our vast statement."

to do not. I don't know how far editorial control extends, but apart from the fact that I don't know what the paper's editorial policies are, or papers or leading men to commit themselves to the fortunes of a candidate so far as the election is concerned, I don't doubt but that St. Louis will have the conventional view of the river and its politics as many advantages over Chicago. The people are thinking too much of the slightly doubtful and forget their obligations to the city. I don't know how far the Illinois River, was explaining the plan on the day that you were back to me from Memphis. Mr. Gaiennie objected to the plan on the ground that it would throw the drainage of Chicago into the Mississippi River, and that the city would be liable to the floods.

He says, "I look healthy, but I'm in the line of base ball."

John Corby, before the series, "I have impartially analyzed the strength of both teams, and I think the Browns ought to beat them." Now "The Browns only had one pitcher, and when they had confidence—Cardinals." Had he shown up as expected the result might have been different.

J. C. Strass: "I'll bet the 'Stratas force the Browns' against the 'en.' This series is over."

Herbert Lee before the series opened said: "The Detroiters are not in the line of base ball in any particular. They cannot touch Brown."

playing." His opinion now is: "The Browns have been fooling the Wolverines. They're Detroiters think they can play—but can they?"

HARRY PASCHALL was willing to risk a kopeck on the Browns in the game. "The Browns are the Detroiters for the Detroiters to go to work," he said, "a real club," he has said, "pleasantly discussing the base ball situation." "The trouble is," he remarks now, "in confidence to his friends," "the Browns have played so frequently with Cleveland that they are bound to meet a club of base ball players."

D. F. Dyer has a pleasant opinion of the Browns' stock and is adjourning depositions and an adjournment will adjourn in order to see a game of ball. His friend, Chester H. Krom, has often moved with him to the game.

the two. "Beat the Detroits, bless my soul, boy, but there won't be hide nor hair left of them," so said the colonel. Speaking in the present tense. "I am sorry for the boys." and never a mean makes he for himself.

Frank Ryan before the series remarked: "Some of these cranks make me sick. Every time the Browns do up a League club they have a dozen excuses. They never come out like a man and say they beat them on their merits. The tending the struggle of the giants. Since the progress of the progress of the Browns through the country some confusion has arisen in my mind as to whether base ball really is the national game, and of which game the club is the champion organization of exponents. Without wishing to prejudice the jury I might remark that I am inclined to think it is poker."

undoubtedly the best club and will win a majority of the games. They are weaker at the bat than the Detroit, but can outfield them, and our pitchers will hold the Wolverines down. Now, Excuse me while I shed a tear. Oh, my, what an exhibition they did make of our own dear little Browns.

crippled. Foutz was out of condition. King couldn't pitch his usual game. Gleason was away off, and both Bushong and Boyle were injured. Nine wooden men could beat them. If the Browns had been in shape they would have annihilated the Detroit's.

after, I will quit prognosticating on the result of the base ball and speculate only on the weather and politics.

Fitz W. Guerin,
 the photographer, has taken two views of the situation. One was before the series and one taken yesterday. He said the Browns would win, but now says: "I didn't get over a plate any better than the Browns I'd go into another business."

short. "Pignies against gnatst could not win."

Lawrence Barrington, the United States Appraiser, valued the Browns and Detroit's DeSieres and the statement on file in the case to the home made article. Since the Browns have been subjected to the hydraulic test he has been inclined to recall the opinion previously expressed. "I think the Browns have won," he says. "If the conditions had been favorable, What they need is a good outfit, a good infanter, several good batteries and a few buzzers to bat."

Jim Hardy, on seeing the Browns off, said:

I don't see how they can lose. After I don't see how they could win.

Mac Robinson, before: The Browns are ball-players from way back. After: I'm glad they know how to play poker. They can't play ball, that's sure.

Clare O. Broadhead, Assistant City Counselor, likes a seat in the grand stand far enough back to be out of danger from either side and he knows the points of the game. "The Detroit," he remarked to a friend, "is the first game of the series, 'put up a kind of Topeka'."

Now you the boss. Give 'em a hand out to some of 'em in opera. Say, you know what? They'll beat the socks off of the fellow. The Detroit's couldn't slide for bases like our boys if you greased 'em. Say, Detroit money is good in this country, ain't it, if you get it changed into greenbacks at the banks?²⁷

F. F. Guerin: "The Browns play baseball." "To-day he murdered." "Von der Ahe killed him." "You know better next year than to put his head under a chessman's." "D. M. Houfer was rarely missed from the Grand stand at Sportsman's Park during the games of the season: The Browns will make mincemeat of that sort of crowd." "I don't know," said a week or two ago. Yesterday he remarked: "Von der Ahe ought to have known that his short-waisted little son-in-law could not play ball with a crowd like this."

said: "Our poor boys had the most awful luck I ever heard of. I wrote to poor George Munson to come out to my house when 'I'm jumping for joy!' he gets back, if he gets hard pushed, for I mean I do have great luck some weeks in my line."

No one shouted louder for the Brown than Joe Carr, because that's his regular job. He said: "That'll show 'em! Wolverines some tricks that they never dream of. I'd barter my chances of heaven to
